Take Nothing For The Journey

There is, at least for us contemporary readers whose lives have been formed in the so-called “developed world,” an unmistakable note of hyperbole in the gospels. It seems unrealistic and extreme to us that when Jesus sends out his disciples to proclaim the Kingdom of God, he would command them to take nothing for the journey and for their work. When we look at our lives and our works as disciples of Jesus, we are well aware that we not only have walking sticks, sacks, food, money, and more than one tunic, we now have institutions, trust funds, corporate structures and even stock portfolios that allow us to serve others and to proclaim the Kingdom of God in a way that our societies permit and value.

To see ourselves above all as disciples of Jesus and brothers and sisters of the peoples of the world requires us, then, to wrestle with the meaning of Jesus’ words to his disciples and to try to hear, realistically, what they are asking of us. At the personal level, I have pretty much every technological tool that I would want to facilitate my access to information and my ability to communicate. I am always discovering, however, that these tools are a two-edged sword.

While they so expand that access to information and my facility in producing documents, they do little for my capacity to think about and reflect on that information and to contemplate God’s vision of life and world. Because I can now see more of what is happening in the world, I often get absorbed in such a way that the eternal nature of the “now” is lost to me. As the breadth of my being informed expands, its depth diminishes. This results in a decrease in the quality of my presence to and appraisal of the present moment in faith.

I increasingly struggle with the tension that as the quantity of the information which I am able to access increases, my human and faithful presence and appraisal of its meaning decreases. The disciples are sent out by Jesus with “power and authority over all demons and to cure diseases” but not with a well developed theology, ecclesiology, or catechesis. They are to go unencumbered because they are not to be distracted by taking care of themselves or their things, but rather they are to be fully present to the other and to the presence and call of the Divine which will manifest itself to the one who is empty enough to receive it.

REFLECTION FOR FIFTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

Maybe the work is best left to the professionals. That’s how many people view the preaching of the Gospel. That’s the stuff priests, religious, deacons, lay ministers, and other professional Church people do. It has little to do with me. Well, that’s not really true. The fact of the matter is that preaching the Gospel has everything to do with you, with all of us who are baptized members of the Body of Christ. Nobody gets off the hook from that job. The question is, however, how do we do it? Well, there’s a safe way, which many choose, to preach the Gospel — and the risky way. The safe way pretty much keeps the Gospel in church and around like-minded people. I say my prayers, go to Mass, contribute to the food pantry, tithe, and attend Bible Study. That pretty much covers the bases, right? Wrong.

The risky way is the more challenging way and for many, the “road less traveled.” Imagine those first disciples going out and into people’s homes. They must have had some amazing conversations with folks about God’s kingdom, changing their hearts, forgiving sins, and looking at the world differently. They must have met people who were hurting, exiled from their communities, neglected, lost, or living self-insulated lives in a society that served the rich and neglected the poor. While there were many who welcomed what they had to say and the conversations they had, there were others who no doubt rejected them and literally tossed them out on their ears! The Gospel, while being a message of joy and hope, is not always received well by those who are very comfortable keeping things as they are.

The risky way involves example and conversation. We have to take the Gospel from church and carry it with us wherever we go. What kinds of conversations do we have with others? We interact with those closest to us, in our work, social circles, institutions, corporations, in politics, and beyond. Our conversations with others reveal a great deal about how we see things and what we consider important. If we are really interested in seeing God’s vision for the world succeed, then we will talk about it. It will become a part of our everyday conversation and find its way into our interactions with others. How will we preserve the dignity of human life and encourage others to have a relationship with God? We must be the example, live value centered, virtuous lives, stand against injustice, combating racism, and learn ways to resolve conflicts without violence.

If we are going to succeed going forward, we have to find a way to bring our prayer centered lives into the marketplace. Our conversations have to change. Not everyone wants to hear what the Gospel has to say. That’s a risk God asks us to take.

WELCOME BACK TO CHURCH AND THE EUCHARIST

Dear parishioners, I would like to welcome you back to your home (God's dwelling place). The past year and half have been difficult, challenging and shocking. It has also been a period of blessing; for we are still alive in the land of the living. So we (St. Luke faithful's) are thankful to the Lord for his blessings and protection. Now that many of us have been fully vaccinated (hopefully you have), we are invited back to our church to physically worship together. Truth be told, I miss your presence deeply and we miss seeing each other, praying for one another and supporting others. As you make the decision to return, please call your neighbors and encourage them to do likewise. We promise to keep observing the guidelines and best practices that would help us gather without incidence. I pray that God would protect us all and grant us His grace and mercy.

I am longing to have you back to share your warmth, joy and passion for the Kingdom.

PS: Fr. Cornelius loves you.
