Welcome

St. Luke is a warm and embracing parish family. We gladly extend our love and warmth to all those who desire to worship and follow our Lord, Jesus Christ. Come join us to celebrate the Holy Eucharist which is the source and summit of our Christian life. Our theme for 2019 is "Teach us to number our days, that we may gain a heart of wisdom." [Psalm 90:12] Together we will praise God, love one another and serve each other.

PASTOR'S CORNER

The Meaning and Origin of 'Vanity of Vanities; All Is Vanity'

In summary, the Preacher who is the author of Ecclesiastes tells us that everything we do is 'vanity': empty, futile, and short-lived. It doesn't matter if you're wise or a fool, ultimately, because everyone ends up dying. The author goes on to encourage wisdom as something to strive for in order to ensure a well-lived earthly life, but he is sceptical of whether it carries any long-term benefits beyond this life. 'Vanity' here, then, is not quite the same thing as 'conceitedness': we're not talking about the kind of vanity where people are obsessed with their appearance and keep checking themselves in the mirror, although there's a faint sense of that meaning of 'vain' here. But 'vain' also means 'futile' or 'pointless', as the English phrase 'in vain' denotes. And we all know what it means if we do something in vain.

Curiously, the word 'vanity' in 'Vanity of vanities ... all is vanity' is an imperfect English rendering of the original Hebrew. The Anchor Bible produced in the mid-twentieth century, for instance, translated the original word as 'vapor', giving us 'A vapor of vapors! ... All is vapor.' Which is still poetic, but unlikely to catch on in such a way as to rival the majesty of the King James translation of 1611. Smoke, vapor, vanity ... they are all an attempt to grasp the (suitably elusive) meaning of the original Hebrew, but they all capture something of the original's emphasis on emptiness. 'Vanity', indeed, means 'emptiness': it's from the Latin word vanus denoting a state of emptiness.

And the formation 'X of Xs' is a peculiarly Hebrew idiom denoting a maximum: compare, in this connection, 'King of Kings' or, indeed, 'Song of Songs', another name for the Song of Solomon (Ecclesiastes, like the Song of Songs, is attributed to Solomon, the 'son of David', even though both were written sometime after the time of Solomon). The key point, then, is that although it sounds like 'Vanity of vanities ... all is vanity' is calling out the conceited self-indulgence of humankind, this is only because of the baggage that our English word vanity brings with it. As Isaac Asimov points out in his brilliant it might be more accurate to paraphrase the meaning of 'Vanity of vanities' as 'All is nothing ... nothing means anything.'

And Ecclesiastes is a book preoccupied not with God and the heavenly, but with earthly or temporal things in this life. But the author is interested in them only because he wishes to highlight the emptiness of them, the 'vanity' at the heart of them. The significance of this message – which has struck a chord with readers and listeners down the ages – is that, even though the 'Preacher' who wrote Ecclesiastes was not King Solomon, he is attributing this sentiment to him. Even a mighty king with as many wives and concubines as he could wish for, with as much wine as he can drink and as much food as he can eat, is ultimately discontented because he sees through everything. All of it is, fundamentally, for nothing. It's all empty, meaningless. 'Vanity of vanities.'

REFLECTION FOR THE EIGHTEENTH SUNDAY IN ORDINARY TIME

What makes us feel secure? Many people look to tangible forms of security that will safeguard their livelihood and prepare for their future. We tend to associate security with things: the accumulation of goods and possessions, retirement funds, savings accounts, and substantial incomes. While acquiring these promises a life with less anxiety and worry, we actually find ourselves more preoccupied and consumed with their growth and preservation.

We worry more! We can easily become quasi-hoarders, consumed with obtaining more tangible crutches. Our minds and hearts are always restless, and we never seem to be at peace. Why do we so easily give our self-worth, value, and sense of security over to things? God certainly does not deny us the pursuit of a productive and enjoyable life but where do we draw the line?

A sense of well-being and happiness can easily get deferred to sometime "in the future" while we continue to wrestle with the toils of today. There is no guarantee that there will be an earthly tomorrow and all of the frenzy we bring to securing our state in life will be for naught. When we are called from this world, will we even know where to begin to look for the tranquility and repose our souls so desperately need?

We cannot be hoarders, pursuers of vanity, or greedy. They just don't work as they are too dependent on things that can fall apart. Rather than always feeling the need for more, we need to learn how to be grateful for what we have. By learning to look inward we can learn how to live lives of faithful service to others. "Happiness can only be achieved by looking inward and learning to enjoy whatever life has, and this requires transforming greed into gratitude (St. John Chrysostom)." We all need to be good stewards of what has been entrusted to our care. Grateful hearts recognize the true source of what we have and realize that our true treasure lies not in what matters to us but to God.
